1. INTRODUCTION

The Johannesburg Development Agency (JDA) plays a pivotal role in driving area-based developments that support the strategic vision and long-term objectives of the City of Johannesburg. As a key implementing entity within the Economic Growth Cluster, the JDA delivers programmes that advance the City's Growth and Development Strategy while contributing to an equitable, sustainable, and resilient urban environment. Through innovative and efficient project management, the JDA ensures that its interventions meaningfully support spatial transformation and inclusive economic growth.

Johannesburg, like many South African cities, is undergoing rapid and often unpredictable transformation. Accelerated urbanisation presents both significant development opportunities and complex challenges. Targeted, sustained interventions in urban planning and development are essential to ensure that these changes do not further entrench socio-spatial inequalities between affluent and marginalised communities. The momentum generated by rapid urbanisation, increasing global connectivity, and local economic growth represents an opportunity that must be strategically harnessed through purposeful public investment in the city's spatial fabric. Spatial transformation remains a central priority for South African cities as they work to redress the spatial and systemic inequities created by historical segregation. Achieving this transformation is crucial to ensuring that all residents have equitable access to opportunities, services, and urban amenities.

The City of Johannesburg is firmly committed to advancing spatial transformation to improve liveability, sustainability, and urban resilience. In support of this commitment, the Johannesburg Development Agency (JDA) grounds its development interventions in a 6 clear set of strategic objectives. The Agency's mandate aligns with the Growth and Development Strategy 2040 (GDS 2040), which emphasises resilience, liveability, and sustainability, and it contributes to the broader cross-cutting targets of the City's Economic Growth Cluster.

The City of Johannesburg is proposing to redevelop the site as a mixed-use area through a long-term development lease and operational model. This approach is designed to mobilise private-sector investment to complete Klipfontein Wellness Centre while ensuring its continued operation, proper maintenance, and long-term sustainability as a community-serving asset. The proposed development will enable the City to retain ownership of the property whilst appointing a developer to fund the completion of the facility and manage its operation and maintenance for the duration of an agreed long-term lease.
