1. INTRODUCTION

The Johannesburg Development Agency (JDA) plays a pivotal role in driving area-based developments that support the strategic vision and long-term objectives of the City of Johannesburg. As a key implementing entity within the Economic Growth Cluster, the JDA delivers programmes that advance the City's Growth and Development Strategy while contributing to an equitable, sustainable, and resilient urban environment. Through innovative and efficient project management, the JDA ensures that its interventions meaningfully support spatial transformation and inclusive economic growth.

Johannesburg, like many South African cities, is undergoing rapid and often unpredictable transformation. Accelerated urbanisation presents both significant development opportunities and complex challenges. Targeted, sustained interventions in urban planning and development are essential to ensure that these changes do not further entrench socio-spatial inequalities between affluent and marginalised communities. The momentum generated by rapid urbanisation, increasing global connectivity, and local economic growth represents an opportunity that must be strategically harnessed through purposeful public investment in the city's spatial fabric. Spatial transformation remains a central priority for South African cities as they work to redress the spatial and systemic inequities created by historical segregation. Achieving this transformation is crucial to ensuring that all residents have equitable access to opportunities, services, and urban amenities.

The City of Johannesburg is firmly committed to advancing spatial transformation to improve liveability, sustainability, and urban resilience. In support of this commitment, the Johannesburg Development Agency (JDA) grounds its development interventions in a 6 clear set of strategic objectives. The Agency's mandate aligns with the Growth and Development Strategy 2040 (GDS 2040), which emphasises resilience, liveability, and sustainability, and it contributes to the broader cross-cutting targets of the City's Economic Growth Cluster.

The City of Johannesburg (COJ) continues to make substantial investments into the Inner City, as part of the implementation of the Inner-City Roadmap. The investment the City has been making in the Inner City is focused on the public spaces and streets aimed towards creating a livable, walkable and safe neighborhood, with excellent integrated public transportation, social infrastructure and open spaces.
